

Katie Campbell Bio

Katie Campbell has worked in the field of nonprofit and volunteer management for 30 years as practitioner, author, trainer and leader.

Her career began in 1973 at the Philadelphia Family Court where she helped develop an extensive volunteer program to provide support services to the probation officers and their young clients. Since then she has provided training and technical assistance throughout North America, becoming well-known in the field. For 14 years she worked at the Virginia Office of Volunteerism, eventually becoming director. And from 1997 to 2003 she served as executive director of the Association for Volunteer Administration (AVA), the international professional association for leaders and managers of volunteer programs. More recently, she was instrumental in establishing the Virginia Network of Nonprofit Organizations (VANNO).

Since 2003, Katie has worked as an independent consultant in nonprofit and volunteer resources management. In this capacity, she assists public and private nonprofit organizations in accomplishing their mission through effective and efficient management of people and resources. Katie has authored and co-authored several articles and publications on the subject of volunteerism and occasionally teaches as adjunct faculty at Virginia Commonwealth University and University of Virginia.
