

Court Ordered Volunteer Opportunities

Many nonprofit organizations have restrictions on activities performed for court-ordered community service hours. As a result there may be a limit on where you can perform your community service hours. With this in mind Rappahannock United Way Volunteer Center has created this listing of nonprofit organizations who have indicated they are willing to consider volunteer applications for court ordered community service hours.

BEFORE YOU START:

- You may be asked to complete an application form, provide court documents and references.
- You may be asked to go for a personal interview. This is to determine if your skills are a good match for the organization.
- You may be asked to attend an orientation or complete training to familiarize you with the organization and the population they serve.
- All of the above steps may not happen immediately – so allow plenty of time.
